

The Homework Club and Aelix enter into agreement to develop new product targeting the educational field

San Antonio May 18, 2005 – The Homework Club, located in the San Francisco bay area has signed an agreement with Aelix to develop a new product targeting progress reports for students. This new product will provide parents and guardians of students with the ability to received automatic progress reports on various subject matter from the student’s educators.

“The product has been a vision of mine for some time”, said Susan Everingham President of The Homework Club. “We are very pleased that we have found a partner with the capabilities to develop and host this product”. The Homework Club foresees that this product will have a substantial impact on the ability of busy parents to have an open communications channel with their student’s educators.

“We are very pleased to have been selected by The Homework Club to develop and host this product” said Wesley N. Waite, Sr., President of Aelix. “Aelix is known for its ability to provide unique and superior communications products and this fits right within the main stream of our abilities”.
